

How a messaging audit benefits your business

10 ideas to ponder

Everyone in your office can explain
clearly and effectively what you do, why you do
it, and for whom.

Your clients can explain what you
do, why you do it,
and understand
why they should work with you

Your website tells your story so that
prospects
understand how you benefit them
and they engage with you

Your social media
is consistent, on-brand, and on-
message giving
people impetus to connect with you

Any employee,
when asked to tell
your brand story,
can, and has internalized it to make it their own

Your marketing
matches the expectations of customers when they interact with
your team

Your message is consistent online
and offline, building
confidence in your
brand

Your message
attracts the right
types of clients
who are profitable
and have a desire
and ability to buy

Your suppliers
understand your challenges and
how to help you to become more profitable

Your messaging
focuses on what your customers care about, and gives them reason to tell your story to others

What could you achieve if your messaging was understood, valued, and acted upon by clients and employees alike?

How can we help
you align your messaging so that it
tells your story to the right people in the right way?
